The acquisition machine is linearly decodable from classifier features, even within one class; fine-tuning reduces it